

Veronica Stewart and Wendy Wright, First Bank Mortgage Lenders, review building plans in preparation for First Bank's Construction Seminar held on February 12 in the Bank's lobby. Anyone thinking of building should plan to attend to learn about new construction methods and materials, financing options, and to receive money-saving coupons and one-on-one expert advice.

Bank Seminar Helps Plan Spring Building Projects

JANUARY 26, 2011

Spring is just around the corner. If you'll be strapping on a tool belt and unrolling building plans, the First Bank Construction Seminar is the place you need to be. On Saturday, February 12, First Bank, in partnership with Tomah Lumber and Monroe County Title Company, will be presenting a free seminar for anyone thinking of building a home, garage, barn, deck, addition, or other structure.

Experts will be on hand to discuss everything from design planning, budgets, codes and regulations to financing and securing land. Whether you're a do it yourselfer, novice, or experienced builder, there is always more for you to learn, especially with the changing regulations.

In addition, attendees will receive valuable coupons and one-on-one advice for their specific projects. The First Bank Construction Seminar will be held in First Bank's lobby at 1021 Superior Avenue in Tomah starting at 11 AM on February 12. RSVP is suggested by calling 372.2131. Refreshments served.
